MEDICINAL

THE MICROSCOPE.

A careful microscopic examination and chemical analysis of the urine, is a valuable aid in determining the nature of many chronic diseases, particularly those of the nervous system, blood, liver, kidneys, and bladder. These aids make it possible to treat such diseases successfully at a distance, without personal examination of the patient. Thus Bright's Disease of the Kidneys, Inflammation of the Bladder, Gravel, and other Diseases of the Urinary Organs are successfully treated. Nervous Debility, Exhaustion, Dropsy, Liver Disease, and many other Chronic Maladies are cured without seeing the patient. Write for question blanks, treatise, and other information, describing case, and inclose 10 cents, in stamps, to pay postage.

THE ARMENIAN BUTCHERY.

The stories of the massacre and unspeakable outrages in Armenia have caused a sensation in Europe approaching that attending the Bulgarian atrocity of 1876, which preceded the Russo-Turkish war. The accounts of wholesale slaughter and fearful atrocities made public Saturday will assuredly arouse the British government to protest, and in demanding a complete reversal of the Turkish policy toward a helpless race of Christians.

The details of some of the massacres are so revolting that if they were not overwhelmingly confirmed they would be rejected as incredible, even among the most savage races on earth. It is understood Lord Kimberly is preparing a remonstrance, which will be telegraphed at once to Constantinople, and be presented to the Sultan in such terms as to bring the matter to an immediate crisis.

The troubles that led to these crowning outrages began with the Armenians' refusal to pay taxes on the plea that the frequent Turkish raids had impoverished them. A few troops sent to collect the taxes were beaten.

At almost the same time there was a Kurdish raid on Armenian cattle, resulting in a fight in which two Kurds were killed. The friends of the Kurds took the corpses to Moush and declared that the Armenians had overrun the land and were killing and plundering right and left.

The Governor of Hittis, Asiatic Turkey, reported to the Porte that a serious revolt had broken out and obtained permission to send all obtainable troops to the scene.

Marshal Zeiki Pasha, commander of the army corps stationed at Erzingan, was ordered to proceed thither and direct operations. The Governor arrived first, however, and before an imposing array of regulars the Armenians quietly submitted.

Then came the horrible part of the story. The Governor of Hittis resolved to make an example in order to prevent a repetition of the revolt. He ordered the troops to fire upon the defenseless people. The order was obeyed with alacrity. The soldiers only rested when 25 villages had been destroyed and 6,000 to 10,000 inhabitants killed.

No compassion was shown to age or sex, not even when the victims fell suppliant at their feet. All met such fate as even the darkest ages of darkest Africa hardly witnessed. Womanhood and innocence were but a mockery before the soldiers' lust.

That ended its debauchery by stabbing women to death with the bayonet. Tender babies were impaled with the same weapon on the dead mother's breast or perhaps seized by the hair to have their heads lopped off with the sword.

In one place 300 or 400 women, after being forced to serve vile purposes by the merciless soldiers, were hacked to pieces by sword and bayonet in the valley. In another place some 200 weeping and wailing women begged for compassion, falling at the commander's feet. But the blood-thirsty wretch, after ordering their violation, directed his soldiers to dispatch them in a similar way.

In another place some 60 young brides and the more attractive girls were crowded into a church, and after violation were slaughtered, the blood flowing from the church door.

At still another place a large company, under the lead of their high priest, fell down before them, begging for compassion and averting that they had nothing to do with the culprits. The proposal was made to several of the more attractive women to change their faith, in which case their lives were to be spared. They said:

"Why should we deny Christ? We are no more than these," pointing to the mangled forms of their husbands and brothers. "Kill us too!" And it was done.

A great effort was made to save one beauty, but three or four quarreled over her and she sank down like her sisters.

On the admissions of Turkish soldiers, some of whom tearfully protested that they merely obeyed orders, at least 6000 people were killed. Several soldiers admitted that they had disposed of a hundred victims each. Some families were burned with kerosene in their own houses.

Mr. Hallward, the British consul at Van, went to the scene and reported to the British ambassador at Constantinople, who protested to the Porte. The Sultan expressed horror at the crime, and ordered an immediate report from Marshal Zeiki, which appears to have seriously involved the Governor of Hittis. The latter, in self-defense, and as a means of obtaining revenge, formulated the grave charge against Mr. Hallward of having incited the Armenians to revolt. The matter is being investigated by British officials.

The Sultan has decided to send a commission composed of three members of his military household and one civilian to Sassoun for the purpose of making an impartial inquiry into the outrages on Armenians. The latest news is to the effect that many of the Armenians who were supposed to have been killed fled from the soldiers and are now returning.
